42 cameras in 2022, then 70

The council leased 42 Flock cameras over two years for up to $233,400, then restated a five year lease of 70 for up to $899,600. One stripe is one camera. Drawn to illustrate.

70 leased, 55 on the roads

The 2023 lease covers 70 cameras. Proposition A asks about 55 along public roads, the Tribune reported. A lease and a road count measure different things. Drawn to illustrate.

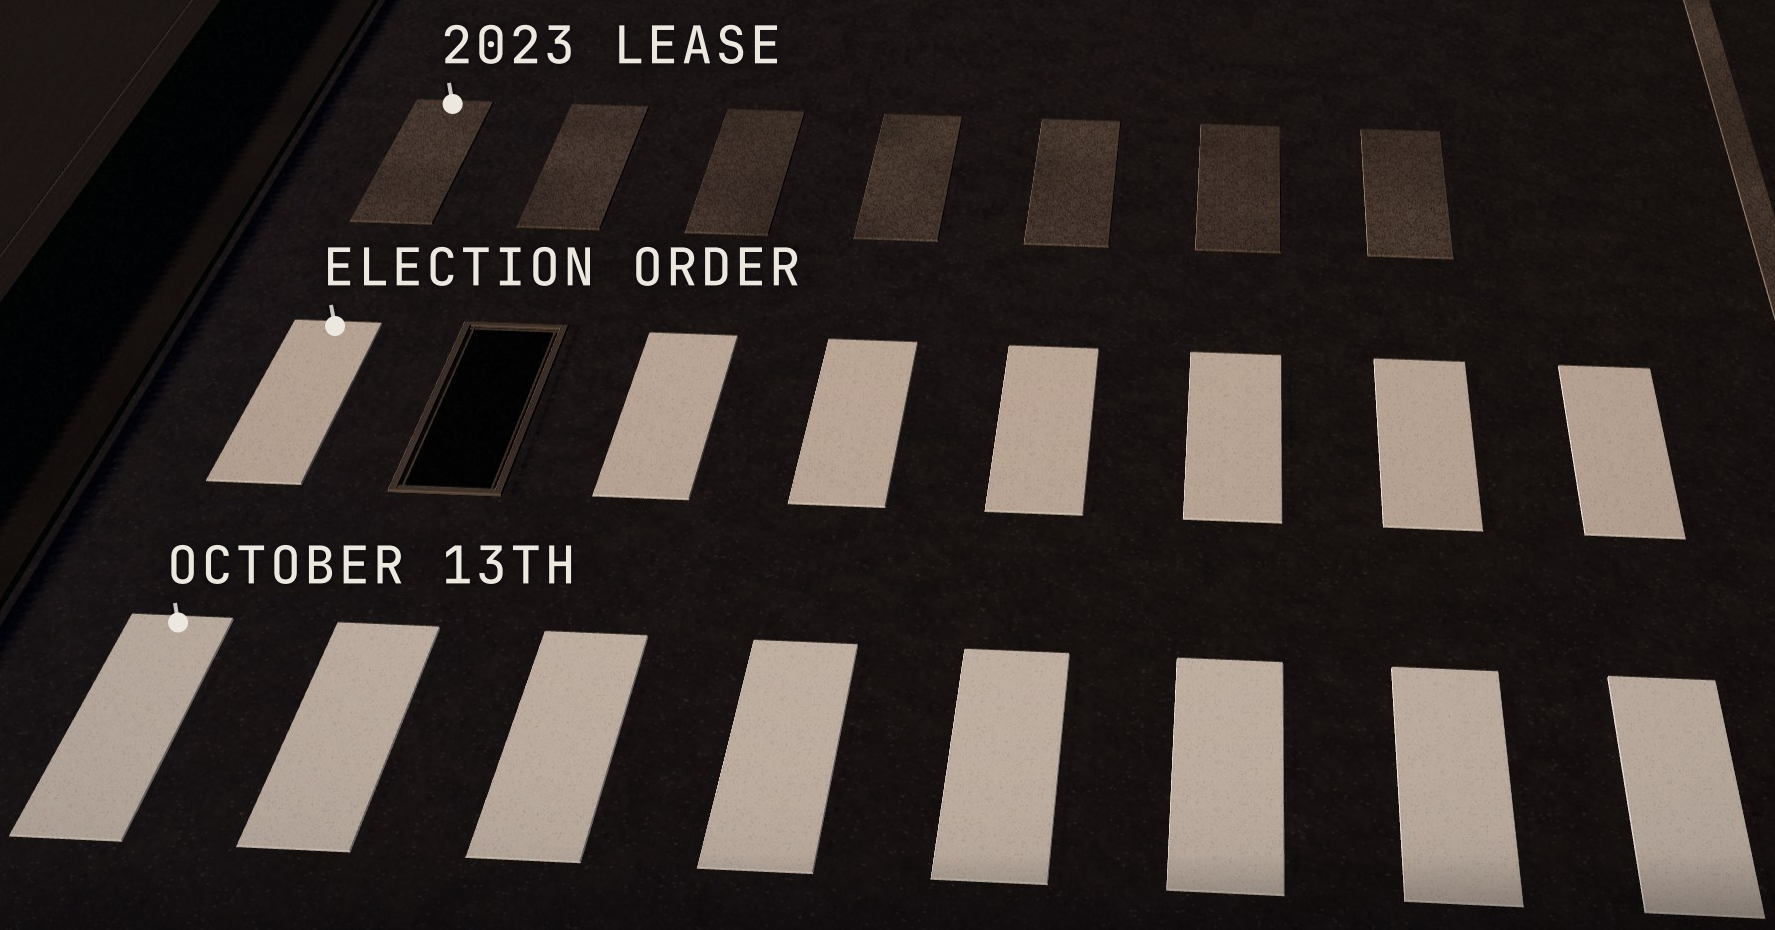

More than 400 agencies can look

All but the FBI are in Texas. The mayor said six League City officers have access. Two must work together to scan the data. Each line is from the Tribune's reporting. One white marker is one agency, one amber marker one officer. Drawn to illustrate.

Seven For, seven For, then eight

December 12th, 2023, the lease. August 11th, the election order, one member absent. October 13th, a resolution on the cameras. No member on the three rolls voted against. One bar is one recorded vote. Drawn to illustrate.

The ballot calls itself nonbinding

Harris County's sample ballot reads "As a nonbinding statement of voter preference, should the League City Police Department continue using automated license plate reader cameras at fixed locations on public roadways for law enforcement purposes?" The council added the word on August 11th. Drawn to illustrate.

If voters say no, removal is already directed

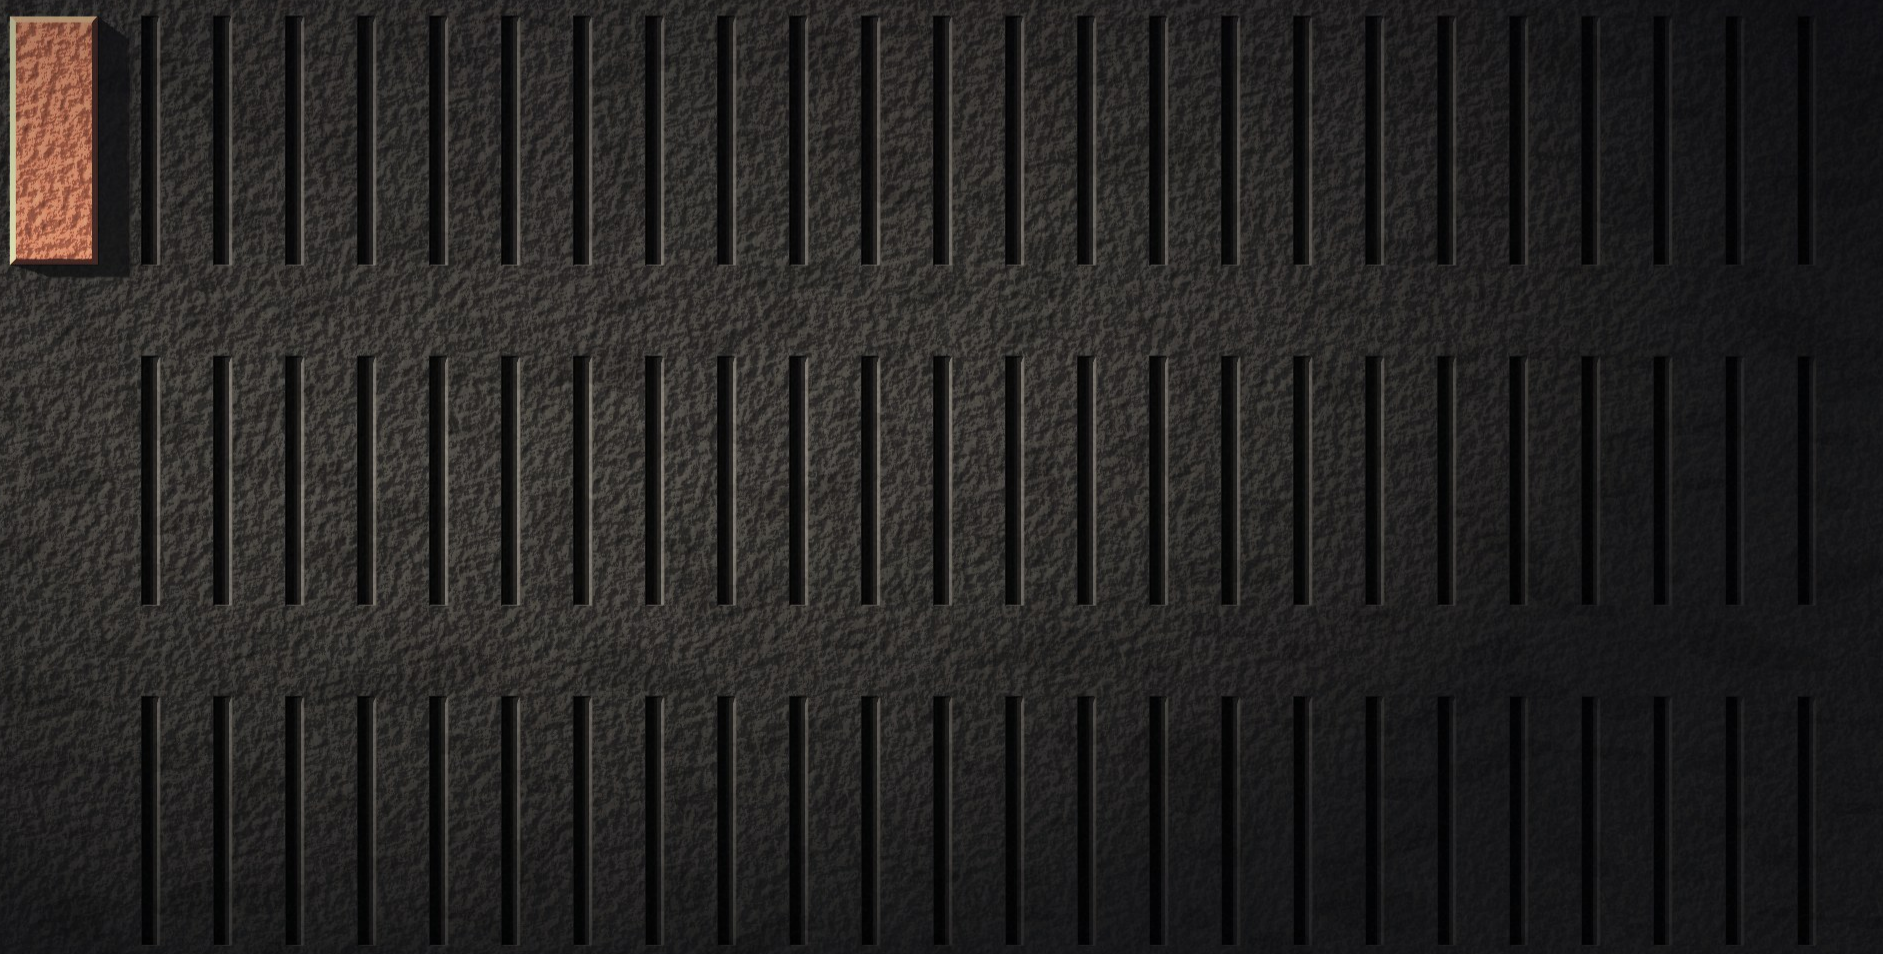

Resolution No. 2026-185 passed on October 13th with every member on the roll voting For. "There's no second vote needed," Mayor Nick Long said, the Tribune reported. Drawn to illustrate.

72 hours after the count is certified

If voters say no, that is when the city starts bagging the cameras, Long told the council, the Tribune reported. Houston Public Media quoted him on getting them down within 72 hours. One groove for each hour. Drawn to illustrate.
